What we are working on

Reading: Readers continued to work on describing how reasons support specific points the author makes in a text.

Skills: In spelling students learned to recognize and use different long a patterns.

Math: Students learned to write base ten three-digit numbers in unit form and show the value of each digit. They also learned how to write numbers in expanded form. Lastly, students counted the total value of $1, $10, and $100 bills up to $1,000.

Writing: We moved into story writing. The students used a mentor author as a guide to create their own stories.

Social Studies: The students learned that communities manage, modify and depend on their environment in order to expand and grow. We looked at settlements in the Platte River and North Denver as examples.
